WHENEVER, JAN. 27, 1897.

Mr. Bryan has sent a baby named for him a hundred dollars' silver certificate. When the boy grows up he can figure out the difference in the value of his certificates as a result of the defeat of Bryan and his free silver craze. He will find in the solution of the problem a most effective object lesson against the fifty cent dollar.

It is reported in our despatches that the lumber schedule in the new tariff bill has been agreed upon and that it practically restores the McKinley rates. We trust the report may prove correct. Free lumber, like free wool, instead of proving beneficial to the American people, has been very destructive, and the demand for protection comes from every State interested in lumber.

In the re-appointment of Commissioner Matthews, Governor Dwyer has shown a sound mortified recognition upon a most efficient official. Commissioner Matthews has created in Maine this department which is now considered an important feature of the government in the various States of the Union and it is safe to say that no one has ever been more earnest and intelligent devoted to the work of the department than is Maine Commissioner Matthews. He is the right man in the right place.

The Citizens Association adopted resolutions at its meeting Monday evening protesting against the proposition to before the Legislature to propose a free railway in this city without giving the mercantile officers any discretion in the matter. Within the past few days we have talked with different members of the Legislature who say that it would be impossible to pass a bill of that character. There is an opposition to the road here. On the other hand it is conceded that a line of street railway to Charlton would be advantageous to the city, but the road can be built without control of the streets in Bangor. We are inclined to the opinion that the form of the bill will be amended so as to strike out this extraneous feature before any action is taken in the committee.

Tariff Hearings.—Commenting upon the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee a Washington correspondent of the American Economist writes: "The recent hearings before the Committee on Ways and Means impressed all who enjoyed the privilege of listening to the testimony with the importance of a speedy and thorough revision of the tariff under protection lines. Evidence is here presented in the form of expressions by members of the committee calculated to show to the friends of protection in this country that the hearings were a great success and that the committee are impressed with the importance of doing all that can be done by Congress and legislation to rescue the industries of the country from the blight of free trade and low tariff which now has the productive energies of the land to the paralysis of human life, for wages for labor, light, oil, consumption, luxuries of fashion, fads, and failing prices, on account of decreased competition, for the products of the farm and the field."

Of course, no indications are given in these opinions as to the probable rates to be recommended by the committee upon any item of the tariff bill under consideration. That was not to be expected. It is important to know that the committee obtained a vast amount of valuable information—information which showed that the trouble with which our industries have been battling during the past three years was the result of the abandonment of protective duties; that another feature of no importance, but organization, party or section constituted cut-and-dried depression to the extreme of 73, the effect expressly or implicitly charged that resulted in the panic of 1893.

There is little doubt that this was an advantage to the committee. While the time given for the oral hearings was ample, the time given for the preparation of evidence was perhaps not sufficient to enable the representatives of the great industries of all sections of the country to prepare evidence to be placed before the committee. On this account much of the testimony, whether oral or written, was hurriedly prepared and was, perhaps, inadequate to show the true state of affairs among our stricken industries.

But it is gratifying to observe that the members of the Committee on Ways and Means were impressed by the testimony given showing the necessity for a return to adequate protection to American industries and labor. The friends of protection throughout the United States will be pleased to read the expressions of opinion by members of the committee respecting the chief features of the recent hearings. Responded by members of the committee to queries put to them by The American Protective Tariff League have been general, and they cover many features of this most important inquiry into the state of America's industry held in recent years. Among the replies received are the following:

Washington, D. C., January 15, 1897.

The recent hearings are in some respects the best I have heard to date. The witnesses have been of the highest order. Your Committee has therefore confined themselves generally to a statement of facts without making stamp statements.

These statements presented a definite picture of the condition of the country, beginning with the election of 1894, and steadily growing worse until checked by the result of the election of last November. The incalculable damage to the law was ample.

The agricultural interests that were adequately protected by that measure suffered, not from foreign competition, but from the lack of home competition. The next Congress cannot afford to let any such a well-balanced American tariff stand.

Stereo E. Payne.

Washington, D. C., January 14, 1897.

The chief fact brought out by the tariff hearings was that a reduction of the protective rates was the main cause of the great depression in the country, beginning with the election of 1894, and steadily growing worse until checked by the result of the election of last November.

Although all alarms were sounded and about half of the city's fire apparatus appeared on the scene, the flames spread rapidly, and the flames were first seen by an employee of the gas company.

It is estimated that several bakers were confined in the Hanson bakery, several rescuers attempted to descend the stairs, but they were driven back.

Finally two young men dashed down the staircase and succeeded in saving the lives of two women, who were captured by the flames.

The rescued employes were taken to a nearby residence, where they received medical attention.

The first floor of the building was also occupied by Dennis' restaurant, where 200 persons were employed, half of whom were entirely lost.

Hirsch Bros. utilized a portion of the upper part of the structure and of the upper story as a smoke room, and the lower story as a lounge.
